Google to Support Complimentary WiFi for the Holidays at Mineta San José International Airport

SAN JOSE, CA – Mineta San José International Airport (SJC) and Google Inc. (NASDAQ: GOOG) are working together to help the airport make the holiday season easier for travelers with complimentary, terminal-wide Wi-Fi starting today and running until January 15, 2010.

SJC launched its free full-service wireless Internet service in May 2008, and this year Google has offered to support the airport's system during the holidays. The SJC service features 24-hour customer support and the network does not block any content.

“As Silicon Valley's airport, this is a natural partnership with Google, and it reinforces our commitment to providing the best customer service for our travelers that we can,” said Bill Sherry, SJC aviation director.

“As we complete our comprehensive improvement program over the coming months, passengers coming through San José will have a completely new experience at a comfortable, convenient, and modern airport that also lets people stay productive and stay connected.”

In 2008, 43 million people in the U.S. traveled during the holidays, accounting for 20 to 25 percent of all annual travel, according to the Air Transport Association and FAA. On average, people will spend 93 minutes in the airport waiting for their flights.

"We're very happy to support Holiday Wi-Fi at SJC," said Marissa Mayer, Vice President of Search Products and User Experience at Google. "We know that it's a very hectic season for people, and we hope that being connected for an extra hour or two will make it that much easier."

Google's gift includes over 45 airports that together handle 500 million passengers each year, or about 35 percent of the total number of annual passengers in the U.S.

Google will also run some limited promotions for products on the networks' sign-in page. More information about the network's policies and administration is available at www.freeholidaywifi.com.
